Energetics of Running Solo

Nobody talke about this part. Let's talk about it.

ENERGY CHECK IN

Before we go further, let's take a breath and check in.
What's your energy like right now? What's contributing to it?

YOUR DEPLETION SIGNALS

When you're heading toward empty, what happens first?
What's the early warning sign you tend to ignore until it's too late?

WHERE VISIBILITY RESISTANCE LIVES

THink about showing up online. Posting, telling people what you do, saying it out loud.
Where does the resistance land in your body?

What's underneath that resistance? (It's not always fear of failure. Often it's something else)

YOUR WORKING RHYTHM

What does you current working week look like? Not what you planned, what actually happens.

YOUR WORKING RHYTHM

What does you current working week look like? Not what you planned, what actually happens.

YOUR ANCHOR POINTS

If you had 2-3 fixed things in your week that never moved, what would they be? Not a full schedule, just enough structure to know where to put yourself.

EXPANSION PROMPTS

What time of day am I actually at my best? Am I working then, or fighting myself?

Where in my week do I consistently run out of energy? What happens leading up to that?

What does visibility fear feel like in my body? What does it want me to know?

What is one task or activity, if I held it every week, would make everything else more stable? Like an anchor point.
